ABSTRACT

Introducing students to the assumptions, values, and complexity involved in implicit and explicit agreements between individuals, this book presents 34 situations which students are asked to examine and then draw conclusions and make decisions based on the information given. The situations presented in the book include agreements, understandings, contracts, deals, warranties, verbal representations, leases, pacts, bargains, and advertising claims. The activities in the book are designed for class discussion by intermediate grade students, with harder problems grouped at the end of the book. (RS)
